Scratching the Surface brings together 14 anti-racist feminists who examine ways in which race and gender interact to shape the lives of women of colour in Canada. This collection of articles covers a broad range of topics such as the impact of colonialism and its associated discourses on First Nations and other groups of colonized women; racism in the Canadian labour movement; the impact of globalization on women of colour; the ways in which the institution of the nuclear family shapes racism; sexism in communities of colour; and the ways in which the women's movement can create an anti-racist praxis. The book not only provides exciting new insights into how women of colour experience Canadian society, but also provides instructors with a textbook that integrates anti-racist and feminist approaches.

Reviews

"A significant and long overdue anthology, Scratching the Surface reminds us that any analysis of feminist theory must be rooted in the histories of colonialism and imperialism.

Peggy Bristow, Coordinator and Co-Author "We're Rooted Here and They Can't Pull Us Up": Essays in African Canadian Women's History

"This needed collection builds on critical anti-racism scholarship, helps theorize insurgent responses to racialized and gendered discourses of "nation" and "democratic citizenship," and addresses how women of colour negotiate their identities and politics across several historical domains."

George J. Sefa Dei, Sociology of Education, Ontario Institute for Studies in Education, University of Toronto

"Scratching the Surface represents a much needed, accessible, and original contribution to Canadian feminist thought. It will certainly add to the critical literature on feminism and anti-racism."

Alissa Trotz, Institute of Women's Studies, Queen's University
